

Richard Friedman

Technical writer/editor with over 35 years experience, now working freelance, has a background in technical computing and programming, internet and web design, as well as digital photography, and video/audio production. Has created programming guides and reference manuals, technical articles, man pages, edited programming books, consulted on information design, and produced radio programs.

Skill Set and Expertise

Technical Writing/Editing; High Performance Computing; Large Scale Software Development; Unix/Linux/Solaris/MacOSX; Fortran/C/C++/Java/Objective-C; Javascript/PHP/HTML/CSS/XML; FrameMaker/Arbortext/OpenOffice/nroff; WordPress/Drupal; Photoshop; Video/Radio Production.

Experience

2008–current :: OpenMP.org: Webmaster, site designer, editor.

1995–2012 :: Oracle Corporation and Sun Microsystems: Senior technical writer and project lead responsible for all aspects of Oracle/Sun Studio C/C++/Fortran and High Performance Computing documentation, including man pages, user guides and reference manuals, website technical articles.

1965–1995 :: Fortran/C/assembly language programmer who also wrote the documentation for supercomputing/high-performance technical computing systems and applications at New York University, Lawrence Berkeley Lab (University of California), Pacific-Sierra Research, Applied Parallel Research.

Objective

Contract technical writing, editing, web design, programming tutorial, or consulting projects, working remotely, short or long term.

Contact

rchrd@rchrd.com 510/407-1781 1107 Rose Avenue, Oakland CA 94611

Websites: <http://rchrd.com> and <http://www.linkedin.com/in/rchrd>